

Verizon Razzle

Thursday, 01 October 2009

It seems that everyone is trying to emulate the BlackBerry success with the QWERTY keyboard built into the mobile phone. Even Verizon has disclosed their latest Verizon Razzle which will feature a nifty QWERTY keyboard at the bottom. Of course, what makes the Verizon Razzle rather different is the fact that you can twist it at the bottom in order to switch between the QWERTY keyboard and stereo speakers.

Other features included in the Verizon Razzle are 1.3 megapixel camera, a very small 2.2 inch display, and there’s even microSD expansion and GPS.

Personally, I find the Verizon Razzle abit of a joke, as who would want to twist and turn between keyboard and speakers?

The Verizon Razzle is available for $69.99 on contract – interested?
